- Voorhoeve 1975f:54.

The name Irarutu is an impressionistic rendering of the phrase Irðrotu "their language true" = 'their own language'. The sequence rðr with two flapped r's separated by a shewa [sic] is often shortened to one trilled r; this accounts for the variant form Irutu mentioned by Anceaux. The variant Irahutu I have never heard. As the name Irarutu has gained common acceptance I shall retain it in this paper.

- Voorhoeve 1989:108.

Irarutu is now spoken by an estimated 5000-6000 people. ... The 1971 census gives the following figures: Arguni sub-district 3000, Babo sub-district 2000. The two sub-districts ... cover all of the Irarutu speaking area except for part of the Nabi dialect area. A small number of non-local residents is included in the figures. ... The estimate given above takes into account the additional Nabi vilages and the steady increase of the population in Irian Jaya.

- Voorhoeve 1989:108.

My informants distinguished seven varieties of Irarutu, mainly on the basis of lexical differences and differences in ...

intonation, stress patterns, and speed of speech. ... The seven dialects are:

1. Nabi, spoken in the villages of Nabi, Rafideso, Werdadne, Owa, and Opu in the valleys of the Nabi and Kuri rivers and in Wagura and Sarebe on the Wagura river. The villages on the Nabi river seem to be bilingual. The second language spoken there was called Nanggwa by one of my informants. This name does not appear in the two existing surveys of Irian Jaya languages (Voorhoeve 1975, Barr and Barr 1978), but could be an alternative name for either Tandia or Mer, spoken to the east and south respectively.

2. Babo, spoken in Sarebe and Wagura on the Wagura river, in Tugurama, Sara, and Warganusa on the lower Kaitero river and in Babo, the administrative centre of the Babo sub-district.

3. Kasuri, spoken in Aroba and Yaru on the Kasuri river and in Tomage village which has a mixed population of Sebyar, Tanah Merah, and Irarutu speakers. Anceaux lists these villages under the Babo dialect but according to my informants they speak a dialect which has similarities to Fruata as well as Babo.

4. Fruata is spoken in Fruata, Taniba-Wararoma, Warmenu-Egerwara, Manggera, Rauna and Werefuta-Temia. Fruata is a relatively new settlement near the Roman Catholic airstrip in the area and is made up of two former villages Mambrieme and Mariedi.

Initially Taniba-Wararoma also moved to Fruata airstrip but it later returned to its old village site. Warmenu-Egerwara and Manggera have in recent times moved from their inland locations to sites closer to Arguni Bay. Formerly Werefuta and Rauna were situated higher up the Gono river. Werefuta local tradition has it that its inhabitants once lived in the hills further west.

5. South-Arguni is spoken along the shores of Arguni Bay in the villages Susuru, Sawatawera, Funiara, Wanggita, Yawera-Manggai, Mandiwa, Tanusan, Nagura, Serarang, Ukiara, Warum-Maisenu, Waroa, Amberwara, Mahua and Bofwer. Bofwer is a new settlement and the administrative centre of the Arguni sub-district. It has a mixed population.

6. East-Arguni is spoken in Borgerba, Afuafu-Gusimawa, Moyana-Bayeda and Kokoroba on the northeastern shores of Arguni Bay.

7. North-Arguni is spoken at the northern end of Arguni Bay in the villages Tiwara, Weswasa and Eregara. /

A considerable number of Irarutu speakers, mostly from the Arguni Bay area, is now living in the township of Kaimana and the nearby villages Tiowa and Krol. ...

- Voorhoeve 1989:108-109.

... Anceaux, basing himself on an earlier report by D. van Beek, distinguished four dialects and a potential fifth dialect:

1. The dialect spoken between the Kaitero river and Arguni Bay, with approximately 950 speakers. (I shall refer to this dialect as the Fruata dialect.)

2. The dialect of central Arguni Bay with about 1300 speakers. (In the following I shall label this the South-Arguni dialect.)

3. The dialect of northern and eastern Arguni Bay with about 800 speakers.

4. The dialect of the Babo area (henceforth the Babo dialect) with about 800 speakers.

5. The Nabi language with about 550 speakers, spoken on the Nabi river to the northeast of the Irarutu language. Nabi "is very closely related to Irarutu and often held to be a dialect of that language".

- Voorhoeve 1994:251.

Irarutu is now spoken by and [sic] estimated 5000-6000 people. In 1958 the estimated total, including Nabi, was 4400.

- Voorhoeve 1994:251.

My informants distinguished seven varieties of Irarutu, mainly on the basis of lexical differences and differences in 'rimia', a local term covering intonation, stress patterns, and speed of speech. There are two locally recognised differences / in the realization of segmental phonemes which in themselves are not sufficient to set off all varieties from each other. ... The seven dialects are:

1. Nabi, spoken in the villages of Nabi, Refideso, Werdadne, Owa, and Opu in the valleys of the Nambi and Kuri rivers and in Wagura and Sarebe on the Wagura river. The villages on the Nabi river seem to be bilingual. The second language spoken there was called Nanggwa by one of my informants. This name does not appear in the existing surveys of Irian Jaya languages ..., but could be an alternative name for either Tandia of [sic] Mer, spoken to the east and south respectively.

2. Babo, spoken in Sarebe and Wagura on the Wagura river, in Tugurama, Sara and Warganusa on the lower Kaitero river and in Babo, the administrative centre of the Babo sub-district.

3. Kasuri, spoken in Aroba and Yaru on the Kasuri river and in Tomage village which has a mixed population of Sebyar, Tanah Merah, and Irarutu speakers. Anceaux lists these villages under the Babo dialect but according to my informants they speak a dialect which has similarities to Fruata as well as Babo.

4. Fruata is spoken in Fruata, Taniba-Wararoma [given as Tawiba-Wararoma on p. 249], Warmenu-Egerwara, Manggera, Rauna and Werefuta-Temia. Fruata is a relatively new settlement near the Roman Catholic airstrip in the area and is made up of two former villages Mambrieme and Mariedi. Initially Taniba-Wararoma also moved to Fruata airstrip but it later returned to its old village site. Warmenu-Egerwara and Manggera have in recent times moved their inland locations to sites closer to Arguni Bay. Formerly Werefuta and Rauna were situated higher up the Gono river. Werefuta local tradition has it that its inhabitants once lived in the hills further west.

5. South-Arguni is spoken along the shores of Arguni Bay in the villages Susunu, Sawatawera, Funiara, Wanggita [given as Wanogita on p. 249], Yawera-Manggai [given as Jawere-Manggai on p. 249], Mandiwa, Tanusan, Nagura, Serarang, Ukiara, Warum-Maisenu, Waroa, Amberwara, Mahua and Bofwer. Bofwer is a new settlement and the administrative centre of the Arguni sub-district. It has a mixed population.

6. East-Arguni is spoken in Borgerba listed under North Arguni dialect on p. 249], Afuafu-Gusimawa, Moyana-Bayeda and Kokoroba on the northeastern shores of Arguni Bay.

7. North-Arguni is spoken at the northern end of Arguni Bay in the villages Tiwara, Weswara [given as Weswasa on p. 249] and Eregara.

A considerable number of Irarutu speakers, mostly from the Arguni Bay area, is now living in the township of Kaimana and the nearby villages Tiowa and Kroi.

- Voorhoeve 1994:251-252.

Irarutu is spoken by 5000 - 6000 people living in the centre of the Bomberai Peninsula, southwest Irian Jaya, and its eastern interior up to the watershed which separates the rivers flowing into Bintuni Bay from those flowing into Cenderawasih Bay. ...

Irarutu speakers themselves distinguish seven variants in their language on the basis of lexical differences and differences in rimia, a local term covering intonation, stress patterns, speed of speech, and differences in the realisation of segmental phonemes. The seven variants are:

1. Nabi, spoken in the valleys of the Nabi and Kuri rivers, and on the Wagura river. In the Nabi villages on the Wagura river also the Babo variant is spoken.

2. Babo, spoken on the Wagura river (see above), on the lower Kaitero river and in Babo, the administrative centre of the Babo sub-district.

3. Kasuri, spoken on the Kasuri river and in Tomage village.

4. Fruata, spoken in the environments of the R.C. Mission station Fruata and in a number of villages south of it, down to Werefuta on the lower Gono river.

5. South-Arguni, spoken along the western, southern, and eastern shores of Arguni Bay.

6. East-Arguni, spoken along the northeastern shore of Arguni Bay.

7. North-Arguni, spoken in a few villages at the northern tip of Arguni Bay.

A considerable number of Irarutu speakers, mostly from the Arguni Bay area, are now living in the township of Kaimana and the nearby villages Tiowa and Kroï.

The Irarutu language group is located in the Arguni and Babo Bays, and in the interior west from Arguni Bay. These bays are / located in the south west of Irian Jaya, Indonesia (Bird's throat area).

- Matsumura 1991:37-38.

This research was carried out from 1985-1989 in the Desa (region) of Tugarni, Gusimawa village, which is located in northern Arguni Bay.

- Matsumura 1991:38.

Irarutu is the name of the language spoken by a people who live on the coast of Arguni Bay, on the south coast of Bintuni Bay and in the interior west of Arguni Bay, in the southwestern part of Irian Jaya, Indonesia.

The word iraru means 'voice' or 'language' and tu is derived from fitu which means 'true'. The people traditionally believe that the world originated to the southeast (in the Nabi/Kuri language area) and that Irarutu is the true original language.

This language has been referred to as the Irahutu language but it seems that this name is only used by foreigners. The people in the village of Fruata (interior) and at the coastal villages refer to the language as Irarutu.

- Matsumura & Matsumura 1991:76.

The language group is divided into two political regions. It is difficult, therefore, to count the whole population. In the 1988 census, around 3900 people were counted in the Arguni Region, excluding the Mairasi and Kuri people in Desa Tugarni. The total population could be more than 5000.

- Matsumura & Matsumura 1991:76.

The language has three major dialects. Two dialects are in Arguni Bay, and one dialect is in Fruata in the interior, and in the Babo Bay area. ...

- Matsumura & Matsumura 1991:76.

Irarutu is an Austronesian language spoken in an area north of Arguni Bay in Irian Jaya ... Approximately 5,000 Irarutu people live in 44 villages, some in the interior but the majority located along the coast. ...
